Software Code Review

- ✿ Feedback from peers
- ✿ Many known benefits
- ✿ Reports it creates toxic environment
- ✿ “Pushback”

Studied perceptions of feedback in code review

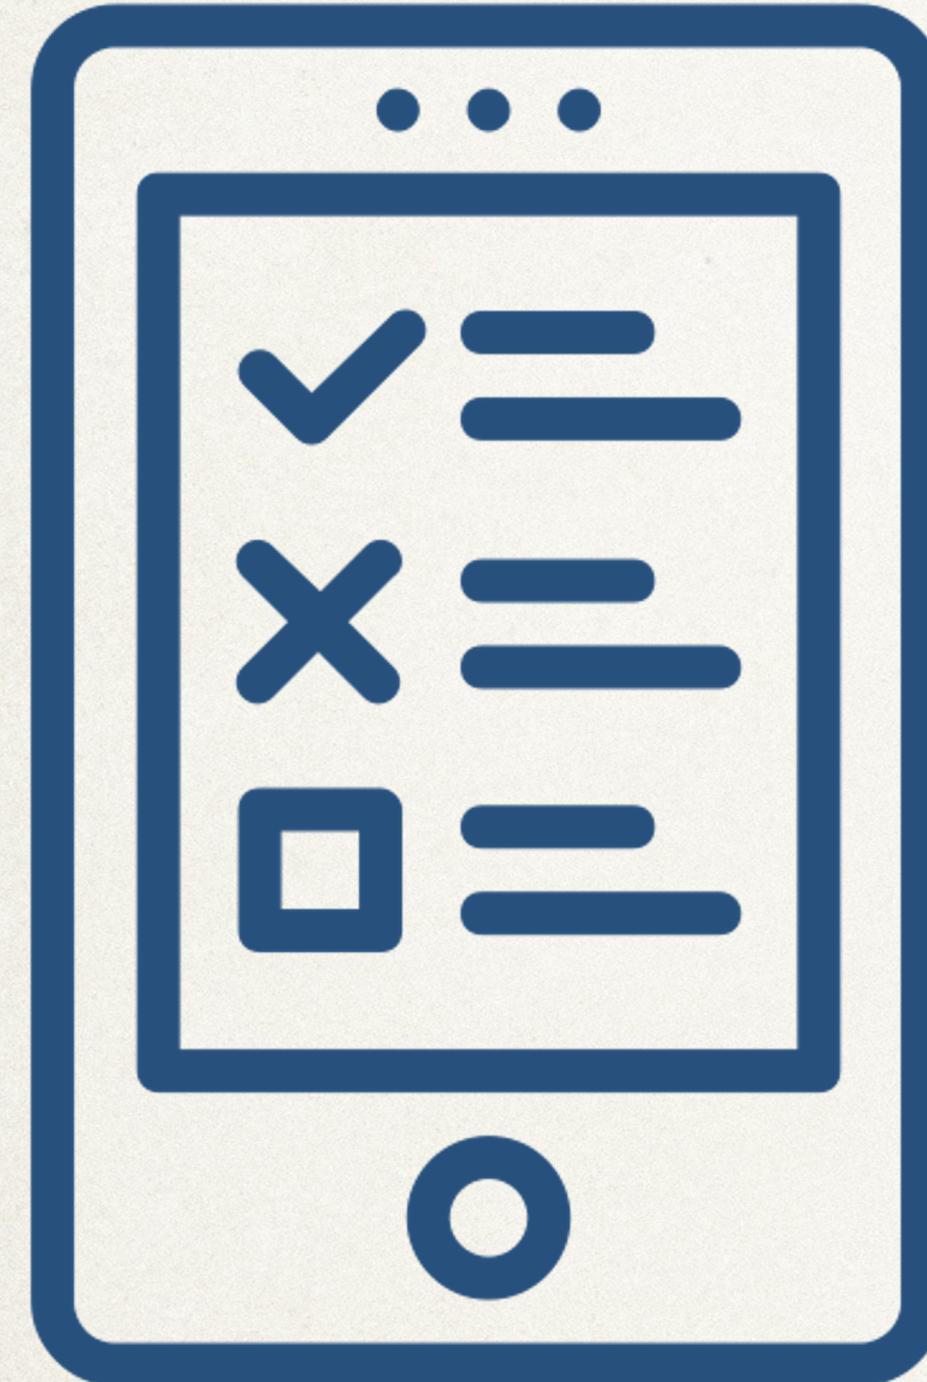

- ✿ Destructive criticism lens
- ✿ Negative feedback that is both nonspecific and inconsiderate
- ✿ Shown to have negative impacts in other domains

Method – Online Questionnaire

- ✿ Vignette style questions
- ✿ Frequency of destructive criticism
- ✿ General opinions on destructive criticism
- ✿ Demographic questions

What the heck is this? We don't need a null check here...

*You don't need to protect

General opinions on destructive criticism

- A - “Destructive criticism is harmful”
- B - “Destructive criticism will cause a negative reaction for the recipient”
- C - “When receiving code review comments, I don’t mind getting inconsiderate feedback as long as the feedback helps to improve the code quality”

‘this is a hack’ is not negative at all in my books. In technical discussions, I prefer direct wording to have-a-good-day sugar-coated expressions. It’s just easier to parse and act upon, though may sometimes appear harsh or inconsiderate.

I think it’s important to indicate when the code is bad, but it should be communicated in a considerate way and the reviewer should explain why the code is bad so that the person can learn.

Conclusion

- ✿ Destructive criticism in code review has negative impact
- ✿ Greater impact on women
- ✿ Conflicting opinions on destructive criticism
- ✿ How can we reimagine code review and other software practices to center DEI?
- ✿ More research needed
